HUBER+SUHNER presents strategy and growth potential at Capital Market Day 2026

The event focuses on the three segments Industry, Communication and Transportation, highlighting their markets, solutions and technologies.

At its Capital Market Day 2026 in Pfäffikon ZH, Switzerland, HUBER+SUHNER will host more than 60 investors, analysts and media representatives, providing insights into the company's strategic priorities and growth initiatives. The focus is on long-term opportunities arising from developments such as artificial intelligence (AI), electrification and security, as well as the acquisition of Ingun, a leading provider of high-precision testing and contacting solutions.

"HUBER+SUHNER is exceptionally well positioned to benefit from structural megatrends," says CEO Urs Ryffel. "The growing demand for high-performance connectivity for AI applications, the global trend towards electrification and increasing security requirements are creating attractive growth opportunities for our business. With targeted investments and our strong technology portfolio, which we have expanded through the recently completed acquisition of Ingun, we are laying the foundation for sustainable profitable growth."

In addition to the overarching strategic insights provided by Urs Ryffel, the COOs of the three segments Industry, Communication and Transportation and their teams will present market trends, selected applications and solutions in Test & Measurement, Aerospace & Defense, Data Center, Rail Communications and Electric Vehicle.

The event concludes with CFO Richard Haemmerli discussing the company's financial performance. Supported by a strong order backlog, a solid balance sheet and a strong position in key markets, HUBER+SUHNER is well placed to successfully navigate its next phase of growth.
